typical pacing · real timelines vary with plant supply & permits*

Plant host — 40h/week

• Picking stock, • naming every plant,
• the repotting ritual, • watching over light levels.

Weekend companion — 16h/week

• Workshops, • deliveries,
• after-hours azulejo watering.

Two people. Soil on the apron, tea on the counter.

Inês · 27 · Arroios

her first apartment, her first plant, she's ready to learn from.

Miguel · 44 · Lapa

brings his dying peace lily in, leaves with espresso and hope.

Sofia · 61 · Estrela

misses her late husband's garden; buys one plant every Saturday.

Instagram

slow, leafy, no captions

Reels: a single fern rotating in golden window-light. Stories: the shopkeeper's hand watering at 8am.

Street presence

the shop is the ad.

Plants spilling onto the azulejo sidewalk. A chalkboard: today we repot for free.

Neighborhood

handwritten, generous.

Deliver one plant per month to three nearby cafés for their counters.

Workshops

small and warm.

Six people, one table, one hour. Post Eventbrite; fill by word of mouth.

Plant supply volatility (Alentejo growers)

Three growers on rolling contract + a small greenhouse at the back of the store for cuttings. Never run out of pothos.

Winter dip (Nov-Feb)

Terrarium workshops indoors, hellebore & cyclamen in the window, holiday-gift program with a weekly pickup day.

Competitor florist nearby

We're not a florist. We don't sell cut flowers. We sell relationships with living things.

Lisbon keeps filling with new apartments. Bright rentals, white walls, nothing alive. Bookshelves made of metal. Coffee on Instagram.

People ask me — what's missing? Something to water. Something that forgets and forgiand grows anyway.

VERDE 22 is one small room on Príncipe Real for the rest of Lisbon to learn plant-care in.

No stage. No jungle influencer. Just soil on the oak, tea on the counter, a monstera you'll name yourself.

The city is ready.
