Window chalkboard

Just today's loaf, time of bake, and a single line about the grain. Nothing else.

Printed leaflet

A six-panel letterpress card for neighbours and hotels. Slow, quiet, permanent.

No captions longer than 14 words.

Letter to neighbours

Hand-addressed postcards when we change the daily bake. Twice a year.

Stone oven downtime	Gas-deck backup sized for 30 loaves/day. 48 h fallback plan with a partner bakery.
Rye flour supply shock	Two Estonian mills contracted. 3-week buffer stock. Spelt substitution recipe pre-tested.
Single-baker key-person	Apprentice trained on the 48-h protocol by month 3. Full written handbook. Shared starter culture.

Tallinn remembers rye. Not the soft loaf, not the shop-shelf brick — the stone-oven black bread that a grandmother used to wrap in linen on a wooden table. MUST-LEIB is one room, one oven, one 48-hour dough, and forty loaves a day. We do not invent. We carry.
