TIMELINE 7 weeks to opening

“7 weeks to first ring”

Founder / Head Baker · 1.0 FTE — Sourdough cultures, 36h cold proof schedule, schedule, numbered-batch logbook, daily 06:00 boil

Counter · 0.5 FTE — 07:30-12:00 service, tag printing, boxes & wax-seal, customer dialogue in German + English

Mill partner · external — Organic flour from Brandenburg, malt from Bavaria, every sack assigned a culture letter team · 1.5 FTE + mill partner

First ring of the day, 08:30 December.

Lena · 31 · UX researcher · Prenzlauer Berg — Tuesday morning before stand-up, always B-02 + cream cheese, logs the culture letter in her notebook. Comes 3x/week.

Matthias · 47 · architect · Mitte — Saturday ritual. Takes 6 rings home for brunch with his family, keeps the wax seal collection on the fridge.

Sophie · 24 · biology student · HU Berlin — Drops in after morning lab, interrogates the head baker about starter genetics. Has her own assigned culture letter.

Instagram @bagel.9 — one photograph per week, Wednesday 06:00. Only the day's dough, only the culture number. No text, never filter.

Culture logbook — a small leather-bound book on the counter. Customers may add the letter they tasted. Published monthly as a single PDF.

Letter card — each takeaway carries a printed fermentation note. 36h · pH · malt · oven minutes. Four lines, one stamp.

Word-of-neighbour — every seventh regular gets a mini-jar of their named culture. No app, no tiers.

1	Sourdough culture collapse (rare but total)	Weekly triplicate back-up cultures stored at mill partner, 48h replant window
2	Stone oven thermal shock in winter	Soft-cycle pre-heat from 03:00, fir-wood ballast, humidity monitored
3	36h cold proof means weekend inflexibility	Published batch schedule · Saturday pre-orders via note at the counter only

A bagel is a ring of time.
Thirty-six hours cold, ninety seconds boiling, four and a half minutes in stone.
Every batch has a letter, every letter has a memory.
We bake them alphabetically. If today is M, tomorrow is N.
We do not repeat the past, we ferment it.
