supply

chickpea prices spike or crop fails after a dry Galilee winter

RESPONSE

contract with two farms in the Galilee and one in Jordan valley · keep a 30-day sack reserve · never raise prices mid-season · absorb the squeeze

heat

Tel Aviv summer afternoons regularly hit 38 °C and people eat less

shut the taboon at 14:00 in August · shift to cold tahini-only + sahlab · half-staff weeks · encourage early-morning pita runs

copycat

a competing hummus bar opens two blocks over in Florentin

the stone mill, the hand-stamp, the six-garnish limit, and the 05:30 grind cannot be copied overnight · Roni's name is the brand · focus stays on the bowl three likely · one unknown · kept quietly in mind

In a city full of delivery apps and ghost kitchens, one counter in Florentin still grinds its chickpeas on a stone at five thirty in the morning and closes when the stone is empty. A bowl is no longer ordered — it is witnessed, in the first minute, and eaten with the hands.
