Matthijs · 38 · Amsterdam-Zuid

THE CANAL NATIVE

Grew up on the Prinsengracht. Finds his peace in the familiar stones and the water's reflections. Values silent authenticity.

why he comes: walks over from his studio every Friday · asks for Nok · pays in cash remembers the first ribbon

spend: €95 · RUST 75

02

Rina · 42 · Tokyo → Amsterdam, once a quarter

THE RETURNING TRAVELLER

Seeks sanctuary in the quiet canals. The city is her European retreat for restoration and reflection.

why she comes: sleeps at the Pulitzer, walks the Jordaan, saves the slot three weeks ahead · buys rosemary sprig for the flight back

spend: €115 · RUST 90

03

Chloé & Astrid · 34 & 36 · Paris + Malmö

THE TWO FRIENDS

A ritual reconnection across borders. They cherish shared moments of calm and indulgence in the city.

why they come: girls-weekend every autumn · book the four-hands · leave with one vial each · dinner at Toscanini after

spend: €180 · VIER HANDEN shared

· gift-card push in late Nov
· 14 % off bookings before 13:00 in Jan
· b2b for nearby architecture offices and Van Gogh museum staff

COPYCAT NEXT DOOR

Jordaan rent is rising · a competitor can open on Bloemgracht in 6 months

RESPONSE

· three-year lease locked
· Sanne's name is the brand
· 48-hour notice policy and by-appointment-only cannot be copied overnight
· keep welcome-kit hand-tied, never outsourced

three risks · three honest answers · revisited every quarter

In a city built on speed — bicycles, trams, deliveries — one canal house on Prinsengracht chooses slowness. Three rooms. Seventy-five minutes. Warm sesame oil from hammered copper. Thai stretch. Deep-tissue. Four hands when you need them. Rust is not a retreat from Amsterdam — it is the city's breath held, for a moment, between two appointments.
