216 · CHEMEX 1

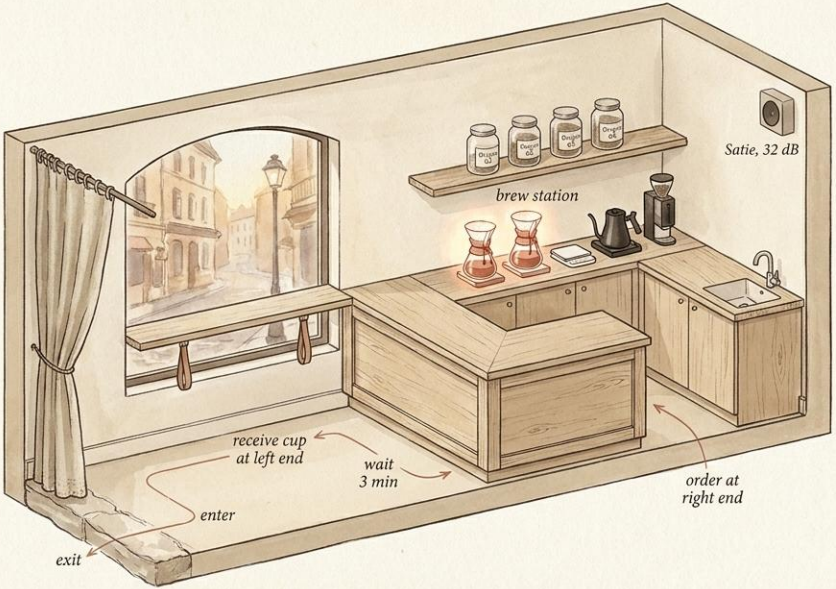
Paris · 8 m² · 6 weeks to open

Only Chemex. Only mornings.

One brewer. One ritual. Three minutes.

216 · CHEMEX 1 — a Paris coffee booth that refuses everything except Chemex pour-over.

No espresso machine. No flat whites. No syrups. Four single-origins on rotation, ground fresh, weighed to the gram, poured in a steady ribbon over paper. The room plays Satie at 32 decibels. You drink, or you take it with you.



8 m² · 1 brewer · 1 barista · up to 3 guests at a time

Rue Saint-Sauveur look-and-feel · any EU city, any 2m-wide bay

You are greeted by the smell before the barista. This is intentional.

One counter. One brewer. One ritual at a time.

Every surface earns its place. Nothing plastic touches the coffee.

Chemex · borosilicate + walnut + latigo leather

The pour.

Three minutes. No substitutions.

Four objects. One coffee. That’s the whole shop.

A. Chemex 8-cup × 2 · €120

B. Fellow Stagg EKG · €195

C. Comandante C40 · €285

D. Acaia Pearl S · €200

E. Origin jars × 4 · €60

E. Paper filters (1000 ct) · €40

H. Linen aprons × 2 · €90

— Core brewing kit · €1,170

Prices are EU averages, benchmarked against Austria. Your local suppliers may differ.
micro.svita.ai bears no liability for price variation.

The menu is four coffees.

We change the origins every 8 weeks. Each is offered as a single pour-over Chemex, carafe for one. Take the beans home if you want to repeat the morning.

WEEK 1	WEEK 2	WEEK 3	WEEK 4	WEEK 5	WEEK 6
Sign the lease. Order the Chemex.	Counter build. Paint the wall.	Plumbing. Water filter. Grinder day.	First roast. Brand the bags.	Soft-open for regulars. Tune the recipe.	Door opens. Satie plays.
· lease · supplier orders · domain & card	· oak counter · paint · floor oil	· water line · filter install · grinder calibration	· roast schedule · label print · filter stock	· 5 friends daily · recipe retune · staff pour	· door plate mount · launch card · first 40 carafes

Day 1 goal — 40 carafes by 11h, all sold or sampled.

A six-week opening is ambitious. It is also small enough to actually keep.

BARISTA · OWNER

Pours every carafe, opens to close.
Talks to regulars if spoken to first.
Chooses the four origins, orders, pays the rent.
€ · owner, draws from margin, no fixed salary

SECOND POUR · WEEKENDS

Saturday + Sunday mornings only.
Same pour, same scale, same timing.
Lets the owner take two mornings a week off.
€ · 12h × 4 weekends × hourly rate

ROASTER · EXTERNAL PARTNER

Supplies all four origins, ground profiles agreed monthly.
Visits once every 8 weeks to retune.
No exclusivity, no branding — her name only on the bag.
€ · invoiced per kilo, no salary

Three people keep this place open. Two are rarely there.

Four minutes is long enough to remember why you came in.

THE FOUR-MINUTE PAUSE

"THE EARLY READER"

Arrives 6:45 · first light
Reads proofs · never phone
Orders the Ethiopia
"Something to pair with the day."

"THE REGULAR"

Stops on her walk, every morning
Brings her own tin cup
Stays four minutes, no more
"I've been coming here before this place existed."

"THE KEEPER"

Thirty years at a bistro on the Left Bank
Now pours only Chemex
Four minutes, every cup, same arc
"Coffee is a small rescue. Nothing else."

Three people hold this room — one pours, two return.

01 · STREET

The door, the hour, the smell.

No signage at night. Brass plate · engraved hours · 06:30 – 13:00.
Open only in the morning. Closed means closed.

tone: understated, never apologetic.

02 · INSTAGRAM

One carafe. One window.

One post per week. Always Tuesday. Always the pour, never the barista's face. Captions in French, no hashtags. Followers: 0 · it's intentional.

tone: fragment, not feed.

03 · NEIGHBOURHOOD

The bakery next door.

A small card at the boulanger. A second at the bookshop on the corner. Word-of-mouth within 400 metres. No advertising.

tone: quiet reciprocity.

04 · THE BAG

250 g, four origins, one name.

Unbleached paper. Hand-stamped origin + date.
Sold only in the shop · never online.
Buy one · take the ritual home.

tone: object, not merch.

Four channels. None of them shout.

01 THE NUMBERS

Paris rent kills single-method cafés faster than bad coffee.

8 m² is a booth, not a café. The rent must sit below €2,100 / month for the model to breathe. Anything above, walk.

This concept refuses to scale horizontally — there is no second location. A ground-floor annex of an existing bakery, a rue-corner booth, or a converted kiosk are the only viable shells.

02 THE METHOD

One brewing method is a narrow door. Half of Paris orders espresso.

This is not a flaw — it is the edit. 216 is for the slow half. The espresso half will look in the window, read the menu, and keep walking. That is correct behaviour. A café trying to please both is a café pleasing neither.

Four minutes per cup means 15 cups an hour maximum — the model assumes that ceiling.

03 THE HOURS

Closed by 13:00. You are walking past half the city's coffee money.

Also the edit. Afternoons belong to the barista's other life, or to nothing. Evenings are not coffee hours in this concept — they are wine hours, owned by a different neighbour. A shorter day means a sharper one.

Lower revenue ceiling, lower burnout ceiling, same margin. Paris has enough all-day cafés.

Numbers here are ranges, never guarantees.

MANIFEST

We brew one way.
We pour four origins, one week at a time.
We open at six-thirty. We close at one.
The record is always Satie.
The kettle is always gooseneck.
The water is always ninety-three degrees.
The wait is always four minutes.
We do not serve espresso.
We do not serve afternoons.
We do not have Wi-Fi.
We do not have a second location.
If that is too little, it is too little.
If that is enough, it is everything.
