Karim A., 44

Master Chef

· Beirut-born, Larnaca-raised
· runs the clay oven, composes the bowls by mood, pours the arak himself.

Sofia H., 29

Counter Host

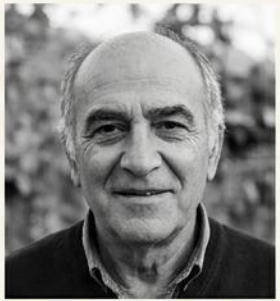
greets, pours wine, writes down birthdays of regulars, knows everyone's favourite bowl.



Yiannis P., 62

Wine Curator

· Cypriot natural-wine grower
· brings six bottles per month, tastes with the staff every Sunday.

one chef + one host + one wine curator · a small family, a long evening

Elena, 37 –

Distri, 37 — Lárnaka old town · architect

architect · books the counter on Thursdays, orders the twelve-bowl blind and a glass of Yiannis's white.

Rami, 45 –

District — Limassol
doctor, Beirut-born

Beirut-born · comes here to taste his mother's recipes without cooking them; always brings his wife on their anniversary.

Haru, 29 –

Distri, 29 — visiting from Kyoto · food writer

documenting Levantine food in Cyprus · sat here three Fridays in a row, eventually never opened the menu.

three different lives · one small room · same pomegranate on the table

Local street corner · handwritten cards in the letterboxes of our Larnaca old-town neighbours · one supper a month, eight seats reserved for them.

Monthly letter · one story about one dish · one translation of a line from Khalil Gibran · never promotional, never daily.

Instagram one still-life a week · captions in Greek and Arabic · no reels, no promo grids.

Wine-bar partners in Nicosia and Paphos · a monthly shared evening · 6 bottles, 6 stories, 6 guests from each side.

the oven smells of oak · our marketing smells the same

August heat · tourists everywhere, locals escape to the coast —	a lighter summer menu with cold bowls and a terrace collaboration with a neighbouring café; reservations held for regulars who stay in the city.
a slow Tuesday · six seats out of twelve unsold —	a twelve-seat family table offered to a local book club, a pottery studio, a running club for the evening — the room is never empty.
a guest has an allergy we didn't catch —	a written pre-visit note form sent with the booking confirmation, a cross-contamination protocol on paper in the kitchen, a backup bowl swap on hand.

*risk is just a question we haven't answered out loud yet

We eat faster than we live.
Twelve small bowls are an invitation to slow down to the speed of a flatbread tearing,
a friend laughing,
a chef remembering his grandmother's hands.
