Word-of-mouth

Every tenth pretzel is free, offered to a passerby who looks at the cart.

rain for a week in April awning + waterproof cart cover, switch to poppy-and-cheese batches that last longer, run a 2-for-3 promo to regulars.

flour price spikes

lock a 6-month contract with a Lesser Poland mill, keep a 3-week buffer silo at home, small 10% ticket increase on decorated varieties.

the city moves the stand one block register a secondary spot near Wawel; the cart is mobile, the brand moves with it.

Kraków keeps selling pretzels from anonymous plastic carts. One honest wooden cart with six varieties, braided in front of the customer, is a small quiet answer. This is not a franchise. This is a craft brought back.
